The challenge was to completely refresh the front of the house while making relatively minor changes. The redesign of the access stair and terrace, the new carport, external paving, mailbox, and in particular the addition of a stone cladding to the lower level of the house and some stainless steel mesh screens have made a big impact. In terms of planning we added a third bedroom and ensured that all three children had a same size bedroom with minimum addition of square meters and mainly by relocating a couple of internal walls. The living area was opened up allowing more light in and a better flow of the space. The project complies with bushfire protection regulation and required extensive documentation.
